TROUTHING.

In New York the season for taking trout opens in counties of Queen and Suffolk, which comprise nearly all the eastern Long Island, the catching of which is done during the season their rivers will have begun. In all those counties, however, the meat of the trout is worth more than that of the salmon. A half allowing taken in the counties named to be used for ordinary use will not exceed 50 cents per fish. In the fry season, those of the largest species of trout are very fine fish, and if you get near enough to them, you can catch them, and they will feed upon small fish. Let him try these different fish; and find out which is the best;

BASS FLIES.

Editor Forest and Stream.

I notice in this week's Forest and Stream one of your correspondents seeks information on the subject of killing the fish that are supposed to inhabit the rivers; the following is a letter written in twenty-five years experience in fish-flying for black bass, and what I can do about the subject, I will do the best I can.

Editor Forest and Stream.

Will you allow me a word in regard to the Sunapee Lake, in New Hampshire? I have been there, and it is one of the best trout fishing grounds I have ever seen. The water is pure and clear, and the trout are large and numerous. The lake is surrounded by fine scenery, and is a delightful place to visit. It is well worth a visit for anyone interested in fishing. I strongly recommend it to your readers.
