Historical Biogeography of the Panamanian Fresh water Fishes

Abstract

Information about the distributions of species is combined with phylogenies of populations inferred from comparative analyses of homologous mitochondrial DNA sequences to estimate the timing of colonization and pattern of diversification for several species of freshwater fishes. The information suggests that the history of freshwater fishes in Panama is complex and involved multiple invasions from South America, localized extinction events, and rapid dispersion throughout Panama. Population phylogenies and geological history are considered in the light of reciprocal illumination, resulting in an image that provides greater depth to our understanding of the history of Panama and the diversity and evolution of the regions biota.

10 Years of Service

Luis Turner received a diamond pin for 10 years of service at STRI on Friday, Jun 17, during Father's Day celebration, at the Tupper Center. Turner started working for STRI in February 1984 as a procurement purchasing agent. Before coming to STRI he was working at the Corporación Azucarera La Victoria. During these past years at STRI, Luis has been an active organizer of sport events and has provided special assistance for the use and purchasing of computer equipment. In addition, he has been the author of several computer programs for the use of STRI, one of them the Multi-User Vendor Master file program, currently in use by the Procurement Department. Due to exceptional services rendered at the Institute, Luis has been received commendations and special service awards.

Scholarship

Smithsonian Research in Honduras

Investigaciones en Honduras

The government of Honduras recently designated the Los Cochinos Archipelago (Atlantic side) as a national marine park and a "protected ecological area". The Honduran government formed a Commission consisting of representatives of the government ministries and other authorities involved in the maintenance of the Los Cochinos area to implement the decree creating the National park. STRI was invited and subsequently agreed to write this management plan. In addition, STRI agreed to conduct the biological monitoring of the Archipelago and to be responsible for advising the Foundation and the Commission on types of research to be conducted at Los Cochinos. The Foundation and Commission have agreed that the management plan will constrain the kinds of activities to be permitted in the Archipelago over the next five years ***

STRI fue invitado y aceptó desarrollar el plan de manejo, además de llevar a cabo un monitoreo biológico del Archipiélago y ser responsable por aconsejar a la Fundación sobre la clase de investigación más apropiada en Los Cochinos. La Fundación y la Comisión han acordado que el plan de manejo limitará el tipo de actividades que se permitirán en el Archipiélago durante los próximos cinco años.
